Welcome to Your Everyday Wellness Workbook

Small steps. Honest reflection. A routine that works for you.

Wellness does not have to mean doing everything perfectly. It can mean noticing what you need, making one manageable choice, and giving yourself room to begin again.

This workbook is designed to help you check in with yourself, identify what supports you, and build realistic habits around your everyday life. Use it at your own pace. Skip any exercise that does not feel useful, and return to pages whenever you need them.

My reason for using this workbook

_____

_____

_____

One thing I hope to make a little easier

_____

_____

_____

A reminder: you do not need to complete every page or change everything at once.

How to Use This Workbook

There is no required order. You can work through one page a day, choose a page that fits your needs, or revisit the same exercise over several weeks.

A simple approach

1. Pause for a moment before you begin.
2. Choose one prompt or exercise.
3. Write, type, dictate, or think through your answers.
4. Pick one small next step, if a next step feels right.
5. Notice what you learn without judging yourself.

Make it accessible for you

• Use a digital copy with your preferred screen reader, magnifier, or zoom settings.

• Increase the text size or print only the pages you need.

• Use a keyboard, voice dictation, or another input method instead of handwriting.

• Take breaks and adjust brightness or contrast to your comfort.

• Ask someone you trust to help with an activity only if you want that support.

My preferred way to use this workbook

My Personal Wellness Snapshot

This page is a starting point, not a test. There are no right or wrong answers. Think about how life has felt recently.

Right now, I feel most supported by…

_____

_____

_____

One thing that has been taking energy from me…

_____

_____

_____

One thing I want more of in my everyday life…

_____

_____

_____

If my well-being felt 5% better this week, what might I notice?

_____

_____

_____

Try to describe your experience in your own words rather than comparing it with someone else's.

My Wellness Wheel

Wellness has several connected parts. You may feel steady in one area and stretched in another. Review the areas below and give each a score from 1 to 10, where 1 means “needs attention” and 10 means “feels well supported.” These numbers are only a reflection aid.

Area	Score (1–10)	What influenced my score?
Rest and sleep
Movement and body care
Food and hydration
Emotions and stress
Connection and belonging
Purpose and learning
Home and surroundings
Money and practical needs

Which area would benefit most from a little attention?

_____

_____

_____

Which area is already working reasonably well?

_____

_____

My Values and What Matters

Values are qualities or principles you want to bring into your life. They are different from goals: a goal can be completed, while a value can guide many choices over time.

Choose up to five values

• Connection

• Creativity

• Learning

• Rest

• Fairness

• Independence

• Community

• Honesty

• Courage

• Spirituality or meaning

• Health

• Stability

• Playfulness

• Compassion

• Other: _____

The value I want to make more room for is…

_____

_____

One small action that could express this value this week…

_____

_____

_____

What might get in the way, and what could help?

_____

_____

_____

Energy: What Gives and Takes

Energy can be affected by tasks, environments, relationships, health, uncertainty, and the pace of the day. This activity is about noticing patterns, not labelling things as good or bad.

My energy map

Gives me energy or steadiness	Uses up my energy
1. _____	1. _____
2. _____	2. _____
3. _____	3. _____
4. _____	4. _____

One energy drain I may be able to reduce, share, or prepare for…

_____

_____

_____

One source of energy I could make easier to access…

_____

_____

_____

Some demands cannot be removed. A useful change may be a boundary, a break, extra support, or a different expectation.

Emotional Check-In

Naming an emotion can help you understand what is happening inside. You do not need to force a positive feeling or solve everything immediately.

What emotions are present for me today?

Where do I notice these feelings in my body, if anywhere?

What might these feelings be responding to or asking me to notice?

What would be a kind and realistic response to myself right now?

If focusing inward makes you feel more distressed, pause and orient to your surroundings. You can skip this exercise.

Stress: Notice My Early Signals

Stress signals differ from person to person. Noticing yours may help you respond earlier, before you feel completely depleted.

My early signals

Area	Signals I sometimes notice
Body	_____
Thoughts	_____
Mood	_____
Behaviour or habits	_____

A situation that commonly increases my stress…

_____

_____

One early sign I want to take seriously…

_____

_____

A supportive response I can try when that sign appears…

_____

_____

_____

A Personal Reset Menu

A reset is a small action that helps you pause or reconnect with the present. It does not have to make a difficult situation disappear.

Choose options that suit you

• Take a few comfortable breaths without forcing them.

• Drink water or have a snack if needed.

• Stretch, change position, or take a short walk if comfortable.

• Listen to a familiar song or calming sound.

• Step away from a screen or noisy environment.

• Send a message to a supportive person.

• Tidy one small surface or prepare one item for later.

• Notice five things around you using any senses that feel comfortable.

• Spend a few minutes outside, if accessible and suitable.

• Choose your own: _____

My easiest reset when I have two minutes…

_____

_____

My reset when I have ten minutes…

_____

_____

What usually makes it difficult to pause?

_____

_____

Rest and Sleep Reflection

Rest includes sleep, but it can also include moments without demands, emotional rest, social rest, and time away from constant decisions. This page is not a sleep assessment.

What helps me wind down, even a little?

_____

_____

_____

What tends to interfere with rest?

_____

_____

_____

One realistic adjustment I could test for a week…

_____

_____

_____

What would tell me this adjustment is helpful?

_____

_____

If sleep difficulties are persistent, severe, or affecting daily functioning, consider discussing them with a qualified health professional.

Movement That Meets Me Where I Am

Movement can be gentle, brief, adapted, or simply a change of position. Choose options that fit your body, access needs, energy, and health guidance.

My movement menu

• A short walk or wheeling route, if suitable

• Gentle seated or standing stretches

• A favourite song and comfortable movement

• Light household tasks with breaks

• A beginner-friendly mobility routine

• A movement video with accessible instructions

• Restorative rest when movement is not right for me

• Another option: _____

Movement I tend to enjoy or tolerate well…

_____

_____

What would make movement safer or easier to start?

_____

_____

_____

My smallest realistic movement plan for this week…

_____

_____

_____

Stop if an activity causes concerning pain, dizziness, breathing difficulty, or other worrying symptoms. Seek appropriate medical advice when needed.

Food, Water, and Everyday Care

Everyday care is not about following a perfect routine. It is about noticing practical needs and making supportive choices within your circumstances, preferences, budget, and any health guidance you follow.

What helps me feel cared for around food and hydration?

_____

_____

_____

What makes these needs harder to meet on busy days?

_____

_____

_____

A practical support plan

ens…	I could make it easier by…
ergy
verwhelming

One small preparation I can try…

_____

_____

Connection and Belonging

Connection can come from close relationships, familiar routines, shared interests, community spaces, or brief moments of being understood. There is no single correct amount of social contact.

When do I feel most like myself around other people?

_____

_____

_____

What kinds of connection do I want more of?

_____

_____

Who could I reach out to, even with a small message?

_____

_____

What boundary or support helps connection feel manageable?

_____

_____

_____

If reaching out does not feel safe or possible, consider another form of connection, such as a moderated community or a trusted service.

Boundaries and Making Room

A boundary is a way of communicating what you can do, what you need, or what you will do to protect your time and well-being. A boundary is not a guarantee that another person will agree.

Reflect on one situation

A situation where I feel stretched too thin…

_____

_____

_____

What is within my control? What is outside my control?

_____

_____

_____

A clear, respectful sentence I could use…

_____

_____

_____

Examples: “I cannot take that on today.” “I can help for 20 minutes.” “I need time to think before I answer.”

What support might help me maintain this boundary?

_____

_____

Making Tasks Feel More Manageable

When a task feels too large, make the next action smaller and more specific. You do not have to finish the whole task to make progress.

A task I have been putting off…

_____

_____

Break it down

1. Write the very first physical or digital action.
2. Estimate how long that action might take.
3. Choose a time or cue to begin.
4. Decide what “enough for today” means.
5. Plan a small pause or reward afterwards.

My first step (ideally 5–10 minutes or less)…

_____

_____

When I will try it…

_____

What might help if I get stuck?

_____

_____

My Support Network

Support can be emotional, practical, professional, cultural, spiritual, or community-based. Different people and services may be useful for different needs.

Type of support	Person, service, or resource
Someone who listens	_____
Practical help	_____
Professional support	_____
Community or cultural connection	_____
Urgent support options	_____

What makes it easier for me to ask for help?

_____

_____

A simple way I could ask for support…

_____

_____

For urgent danger or a medical emergency, contact local emergency services. In Canada, call or text 988 for suicide crisis support.

My Personal Well-Being Plan

Choose a few supports that are realistic for your life right now. A plan can be adjusted as circumstances change.

Area	Small action	When or how often
Rest
Movement or body care
Connection
Stress support
Practical task

The first action I will try…

_____

_____

What could make this plan easier to follow?

_____

_____

How will I respond if I miss a day?

_____

_____

A missed day is information, not failure. Restart with the smallest useful step.

My Week at a Glance

Use this page to make space for needs as well as tasks. Keep the plan flexible and leave room for unexpected demands.

Day	One priority	One supportive action
Monday
Tuesday
Wednesday
Thursday
Friday
Saturday
Sunday

One thing I can postpone, simplify, or ask for help with…

_____

_____

A moment I want to look forward to…

_____

_____

A Five-Minute Reflection

This short reflection is for days when you do not have the time or energy for a longer exercise.

What is taking up the most space in my mind?

What is one thing I need today?

What can wait?

What is one small thing I can do next?

What would I say to someone I care about in my situation?

Reframing the Inner Critic

The goal is not to replace every difficult thought with a positive one. Try to find a response that is fair, balanced, and useful.

A self-critical thought I have noticed…

_____

_____

What facts support or complicate that thought?

_____

_____

_____

What would a fairer, more compassionate version sound like?

_____

_____

_____

What small action fits this more balanced view?

_____

_____

You can acknowledge a hard truth without attacking yourself.

Joy, Meaning, and Small Pleasures

Pleasure and meaning do not have to be expensive, productive, or impressive. Small moments count, even when they do not fix a difficult day.

Three small things that can lift or steady me…

An interest I would like to return to or explore…

A meaningful moment I remember from recently…

How could I make room for one small pleasure this week?

My Digital and Environmental Well-Being

Your surroundings and digital habits can affect attention, energy, and comfort. Choose adjustments that are practical and accessible for you.

Quick environment check

• Is there one item I can put where I will find it?

• Could I reduce an avoidable notification or interruption?

• Would a reminder, calendar, or checklist help?

• Is my workspace comfortable and usable?

• Do lighting, sound, temperature, or screen settings need adjusting?

• Is there one task I can prepare for tomorrow?

One change to my physical environment…

_____

_____

One change to my digital environment…

_____

_____

What accessibility adjustment helps me most?

_____

_____

When My Plan Does Not Go to Plan

Life changes. Energy changes. Responsibilities change. A wellness plan should be able to change too.

What disrupted my plan recently?

_____

_____

_____

Was the plan too big, poorly timed, or missing support?

_____

_____

_____

What can I learn without blaming myself?

_____

_____

How can I make the next attempt smaller or more realistic?

_____

_____

_____

You are allowed to revise a plan that no longer fits.

My Progress: Notice What Is Changing

Progress may look like asking for help sooner, noticing stress earlier, resting without guilt, or making a task more manageable. It is not always a dramatic change.

Something I understand about myself better now…

_____

_____

_____

A choice or habit that has helped, even a little…

_____

_____

_____

A challenge that still needs care or support…

_____

_____

What would I like to keep practising?

_____

_____

My 30-Day Gentle Wellness Challenge

Choose a small action for each week. Repeat it if helpful. Change it if it does not fit. Consistency is an experiment, not a test of character.

Week	Focus	My small action
1	Notice	_____
2	Support	_____
3	Practise	_____
4	Review and adjust	_____

My reminder or cue…

_____

_____

How I will make the challenge accessible and realistic…

_____

_____

At the end of 30 days, I want to reflect on…

_____

_____

My Personal Wellness Toolkit

Gather the ideas from this workbook that you want to keep close. This page is your quick-reference guide for difficult or busy days.

Three things that help me feel steadier…

_____

_____

_____

My early signs that I need support…

_____

_____

People or services I can contact…

_____

_____

My smallest next step when I feel overwhelmed…

_____

_____

One reminder I want to keep…

_____

_____

Closing Reflection and Next Steps

Thank you for taking time to reflect on your well-being. You may have discovered a useful action, a need that deserves attention, or simply a clearer understanding of how things are going.

What am I taking away from this workbook?

_____

_____

_____

What do I want to continue, change, or leave behind?

_____

_____

_____

What is one kind and practical commitment I can make to myself?

_____

_____

_____

Keep the pages that help you. Return when your circumstances change. You can begin again at any point.

A note on support

This workbook is an educational self-reflection resource, not a substitute for counselling, psychotherapy, diagnosis, or medical care. If your well-being concerns persist, worsen, or interfere with daily life, consider contacting a qualified health professional or a trusted local support service. If you are in immediate danger, call emergency services. In Canada, call or text 988 for suicide crisis support.